Yes, this is all coordinated and deliberate. By acclimatizing people to abuses during a fictional state of emergency, it becomes easier to implement a real one. Every bizarre and obvious falsehood spoken by the president encodes a preview of what he and his team would like to do next. Effective resistance to such violent lunacy can only emerge from the coherence of reason. So start by adhering to reality, and reject outright the false narrative that everything should make us afraid.
Eager to protest, fight back, and resist? Looking for direct pressure points against the machinery of the state? You won’t find many. But redirecting the flow of private money via boycott remains the most powerful political tool in the public’s kit — other than voting, or the open violence of revolution. So let us focus on a coordinated mass strike of consumption, a great withholding, aimed against the private industries that support poisonous politics.
Art Against Immigration Ban - - - - - - -
2,355 signatories as of Mar. 1, 2017

We the undersigned individuals of the international contemporary art field call for the immediate and total overturning of the Executive Order signed by the 45th President of the United States on January 27, 2017, banning entry to any non-US citizens from Iran, Iraq, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria, and Yemen; this encompasses the 90-day suspension of entry by people of those countries (which includes dual nationals), the 120-day suspension of entry by refugees, and the indefinite suspension of entry for Syrian refugees.

In addition to the humanitarian crisis exacerbated by these discriminatory measures, our fellow colleagues are being profiled based on race and/or religion. Should our colleagues have to leave the United States for any reason, they must not fear being denied return; nor should they have to cancel exhibitions or research because they cannot enter this country. Our field is dependent upon international collaboration and cross-cultural exchange, and these cross-border and cross-cultural collaborations benefit the general public; the ban thus affects all of us.

The entirety of the Executive Order is unjust and must be overturned.

THE TIME OF USEFUL CONSCIOUSNESS, is the phrase the poet Lawrence Ferlinghetti used to describe the preciousness of our current moment. Originally an aeronautical term, the time of useful consciousness is those few moments between being deprived of oxygen and passing out, moments in which the full extent of the danger is known, but it is still possible to act. We are in the Time of Useful Consciousness, the brief period where we still have an opportunity to save the delicate balance of the atmosphere and the civilisation that depends on it. How long is this time? Only a few decades. We have around 30 years from 2017 in which to act decisively to reduce carbon emissions to around ‘net zero’: if emissions are not close to zero by 2045 it will likely no longer be possible to stay within the ‘safe’ level of below 2 degrees Celsius and prevent catastrophic climate change. The process that needs to happen is a descent down the ‘Carbon Staircase’: a visualisation of the deliberate and rapid steps required to move from our present peak carbon production to a zero carbon economy by around 2045. The first step (present – 2020) requires nations beginning to act on the most basic commitments made under the Paris Agreement: measures like removing the existing subsidies for fossil fuels, implementing stringent carbon taxes or recalibrating emissions trading schemes to make the price on carbon realistic. The second ‘herculean’ step (2020–2030) will require the complete phasing out of coal mines and combustion engines in cars. The third step (2030–2040) will require the transformation of cities though building with low or zero-emission materials (wood instead of concrete) The last step (2040–2045...) will be the transition to all energy being generated from renewable technologies. The ‘controlled implosion’ of the fossil fuel industry needs to occur within the Time of Useful Consciousness.
